Wants Keystone State to Have Part in Selection of Party's Course

CASTIGATES NEW DEAL

Governor Says Administration Is Cultivating Fear Among
The American People

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 13.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's Gov. Arthur H. James today made his bid for the 1940 Republican presidential nomination as he demanded that the Keystone State be "given a voice" in selection of the party's course and leader this year.

During a severe castigation of the Roosevelt New Deal administration, the Pennsylvania executive told a Lincoln Day audience here that "historically, geographically and politically" Pennsylvania was "entitled to a voice" in adoption of a party program.

Governor James, breaking a lengthy silence on national issues, accused the Roosevelt Administration of cultivating fear among the American people—"a people . . . at times so sick from fear that they care little whether as a nation the live or die."

"Lincoln, if he returned," the Governor declared, "would find a nation

Books Are Selling Rapidly; Only Few Remain

The book recently published by Doron Green entitled "A History of the Old Homes on Radcliffe Street, Bristol, Pa.," has been well received by the public and is selling rapidly. Upon inquiring of Mr. Green it was disclosed that he has only 100 volumes left and a demand for the book still continues.

It is interesting to note the number of books that have been sent to former residents of Bristol. A copy of the book was forwarded to Lawrence Young, an attaché of the American Embassy at Havana, Cuba. Recently Mr. Green received an order for a book from "a young man named Vansant" who is in the United States aviation service and stationed at Wheeler Field, Honolulu, Hawaii. When John Weik left Bristol a couple of weeks ago, on a trip west, he took with him two copies of the book, one for Julian McLaughlin, of Arizona, and the other for "Ted" Baker, in southern California. Both McLaughlin and Baker are former Bristol residents. Copies have been sent to Wisconsin, Texas, New Hampshire and St. Petersburg, Florida. From the latter place, Mr. Green recently received a congratulatory letter from a Mr. Cooper, who for a number of years was a teacher at Peddie Institute, N. J.

The edition was limited to 450 volumes and it should be understood that after all the copies have been sold no more can be obtained, as there will be no subsequent editions. It is suggested, there, it would be well for those who want copies not to put off too long the purchasing of them, as at the present rate of sales, all the copies will soon be gone.

New Russian Offensive

By Peter de Hemmer Gudme
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Helsinki, Feb. 13.—A new Russian offensive against Finland's northeast Salla front broke out today, while on the Carelian Isthmus, some 300,000 Red troops hurled themselves against the Mannerheim line.

The assault against the Mannerheim line, and particularly the Summa sector, were reported continuing with increased strength. Dispatches from the far north told of the renewed assault on the Salla front, where the Russians dropped a large number of parachute troops.

The Red assaults were repulsed and 1,000 Russians were killed, it is claimed. Although Russian guns pounded the Mannerheim line, latest reports indicated they had failed to attempt it.

Allegheny Waters Recede

Parkers Landing, Feb. 13.—Flood waters abated down the Allegheny River Valley today as water, backed up by a 12-mile ice gorge, slowly receded from Parkers Landing, leaving behind tons of river ice.

Rising swiftly, the Allegheny River backwash reached a crest of three feet above flood stage last night, carrying huge blocks of ice into this community's main street. Overnight, however, the water fell short, and no new immediate danger was expected.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS FIND STEERS GAINED

Beeves Increase in Weight Estimated at About Two Pounds Per Day

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 13.—Members of the Bucks County 4-H Baby Beef Club have found that during the first 55 days of feeding the steers have gained 120 pounds, or more than two pounds a day.

Making a visit to the farms of the members of the 4-H Baby Beef Club members in Bucks county on Friday, County Agent William F. Greenawalt, C. A. Burge, extension specialist of animal husbandry of State College, and three members of the committee, Clifford Yerkes, Newlin Hoagland, both of Davisville, and Harold Hamilton, of Gardenville, learned that several of the boys and girls have weighed their steers and found out that the steers have gained.

At the meeting held on Friday evening, when County Agent Greenawalt presided in the men's jury room, with an attendance of 15 members and their parents, C. A. Burge commended the boys and girls on their feeding and management program.

The speaker recommended that the members provide out-of-doors lots for baby beeves regardless of the weather. He suggested changing over to feeding ration, Number 2, which consists of 70 pounds of cracked corn, ten pounds of whole oats, bran and oil meal.

He advised to begin feeding the animals that as long as they clean up in about 15 or 20 minutes twice a day. Mr. Burge assisted each boy and girl in making a rope halter.

During the day the guest speaker, County Agent Greenawalt and the three committee members visited each 4-H Baby Beef member's home and made an inspection of the steer.

The newest of the 4-H club projects in the county, the baby beef work has captured the interest of the boys and girls completely.

Mrs. Nelson O. Fretz, president of the hostess club, extended a welcome, and introduced the Rev. Edward L. Schlingman, formerly of Ottsville.

The Rev. Mr. Schlingman brought a special message to the mothers of today. His general theme was along the line of more ideal home life and the tendency of youth to imitate home environment. Rev. Mr. Schlingman stressed the importance of co-operation among the parents for the sake of the children.

Music throughout the afternoon was furnished by the guests, and during the program the members of the club chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Charles M. Meredith, Jr., rendered selections.

Miss Vera Gumpfer, of Churchville, and Alfred Bohmler, Newtown, were united in marriage Wednesday afternoon.

The ring ceremony was used by Rev. Henry J. Baker, pastor of the Newtown Baptist Church, where the wedding was consecrated.

A wedding dinner followed the ceremony at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anselm Bohmler, Newtown.

Social studies teachers of Bucks County public schools will meet in George School on February 26th at eight o'clock, when a round-table discussion will be held.

Frank Cope, Jr., and Russell Croman, acting; James D. Ruff, Irma G. Larzelere, Benjamin Larzelere, Nick Mark, W. F. Vandegriff, Julian W. Gardy, Ralph Ashton, Holmes & Howard, George Slotter, Roger W. Kraut, Louis Pearlman, Walt & Ray's barbershop, Mrs. George W. Kerr, Fred Hupp, Robert Warden, Roy Bergstresser, Fred Goss, William A. Christman, all of whom were procured by Clarence Irwin, an active fireman.

Mrs. Charles Hunter announced the numbers, with Mrs. William Janney participating. Others giving numbers in connection with the subject were Mrs. Reuben P. Kester, Mrs. A. Kurtz King, and Mrs. Alfred Walton.

The outlook for Finland now is "grave," neutral observers said, although conviction was expressed that the Finns would continue to hold out indefinitely. Reports of the Russian successes were given more credence than claims voiced in Moscow last week, that the Mannerheim Line had been "attempted" in several places.

These claims were ridiculed by the Finnish high command, which said that the enemy "had failed to gain a yard."

Numerous counter attacks by the Finns have failed to dislodge the Russians from the outposts, with the loss of life believed to approximate 3,000 men a day.

Despite the enormous strength of the Mannerheim Line and the brilliant strategy of its construction, the breakdown of the outer defenses had to be expected sooner or later, considering the number of men poured into the combat by the Red Army.

Meanwhile, reports from Oslo said that the Russians had reinforced military activity on the Petsamo front.

See Possible Anglo-French Action Against Russia

London, Feb. 13.—Arrival in the Near East of a huge expeditionary force from Australia and New Zealand gave rise to sensational reports today of possible Anglo-French action against Russia.

Reports found no corroboration, but persisted, nevertheless. (Editor's note: This dispatch like all others from London was passed by the British censor.)

Numerous circles which expressed foreign conviction that Britain and France is planning some action against Russia claims that the Allies now are satisfied that Russia is allowing Germany to use Murmansk as a base for naval operations.

In addition, war materials used against Finland are being shipped by way of Murmansk, this information declared, although the German government officially has denied giving military aid to Russia against Finland.

Accused of Annoying Children in Fifth Ward

Accused of annoying little girls and boys in the vicinity of the alley which extends from Pond to Chestnut streets, between Adams Hollow Creek and Jefferson avenue, Ernest Di Solvo, 22, Lincoln avenue, was charged with disorderly conduct last night and paid fine and costs of $14.

Several small children testified that Di Solvo was the man who called to them as they passed the alley.

Di Solvo denied the accusation and said that he had been to a nearby store for a bottle of milk on Saturday night.

Di Solvo was arrested by the police, who had been summoned by parents in the neighborhood.

RESPONSIBILITIES GIVEN

Rev. D. S. Evans, pastor of Burlington, N. J. Methodist Church, in delivering an address before the Christian Fellowship League of Lower Bucks County, last evening, had as his subject, "A Christian's Opportunity in the Twentieth Century."

The session was held in Bristol Methodist Church, and the guest speaker illustrated by referring to the early life of Moses, and his vision of the burning bush. "Most of us don't see the burning bush," and therefore don't see God. The road in Moses' hand was a power for God, but on the ground it was useless. And Moses' hand in his bosom was leprous or useless, but when put to use it was powerful."

Then the question was asked by the speaker: "How long will God wait for the church to do something for Him? Although Moses spent 40 years in Egypt he couldn't forget his sin, and couldn't face the burning bush because of his past sin. Neither can we forget our sin."

The gathering was impressed with the importance of putting one's hands to work. "We should use our hands.
The church is not outstanding because our hands have not been put to work."

Reds Capture Several Outposts

Copenhagen, Feb. 13.—Shock troops in the Red Army achieved a measure

BOROUGH BUDGET APPROPRIATES SUM OF $78,090 FOR 1940

General Receipts Are Estimated at $78,605.53 for Current Year

HOW IT WILL BE SPENT

Sums Have Been Allocated
For Each of the Borough Activities

(The complete budget will be found on page 4)

Borough Council last night unanimously adopted the budget for 1940 and without a dissenting vote fixed the tax rate for the borough at 13 mills,
the same figure as last year.

Council was called to order by Burgess Clifford L. Anderson and William W. Warner was selected to act as president pro tem in the absence of Dr. J. Fred Wagner. Later Dr. Wagner arrived and took the chair.

The budget resolution was read by the secretary, William J. Lefferts, and it was adopted. Then the tax ordinance was read and upon motion the rules of council were suspended and the ordinance was placed on second reading and final passage. The vote for its adoption was unanimous. The councilmen absent were Spring, Vandegriff and Clark.

The budget appropriates a total of $78,090 of the general receipts of the borough which it is estimated will total $78,605.53 during the current year. This will leave an estimated balance of $515.53 at the end of 1940
in this account.

Appropriations for some of the borough activities were increased over the amounts allotted for them during 1939. Five hundred dollars additional has been allocated for the expenses of the fire department, the appropriation for fire protection being increased from $8,500 to $9,000.

The cost of operating the sanitary sewers was cut $1,000, being reduced from $15,000 to $14,000. The cost of ash and rubbish collection and the disposal thereof was raised from $2,- 300 to $2,490.

It is estimated that the care of streets and bridges during 1940 will cost $12,000. This is an increase of $2,400 over the amount appropriated for this department in 1939.

The anticipated receipts for the sinking fund are given as $41,259.88.
This money will be spent in the following manner: For bonds to be retired, $17,000; interest and state tax, $9,552;
refunds and other expenditures, $350.
This will leave a balance of $14,457.88
in this account to care for the future retirement of bonds.

Including a cash balance on hand,
in the water fund, estimated receipts from the sale of water, and receipts from other sources will total $79,-

CAR SERVICE AT HAND

For every mile and a half of United States highways, says the American Automobile Association, there is a filling station or a garage. Is that too many? Too many, perhaps, to permit all of them to operate at a profit, but not too many for the accommodation of the traveling public.

For good or ill it has come to pass that the average motorist knows nothing whatever about his car. No longer, as in the ancient days, does he pull on a pair of overalls and "get out and get under"; he is as helpless to correct the infirmities of his power plant as he would be to tinker with the mechanism of the Queen Mary.

Nor does he carry equipment to mend his own tires, and it would tax his ingenuity, as well as his temper, even to change to a spare.

When stalled, therefore, he is stalled for good until professional assistance arrives. And a three-quarters of a mile walk or a five minute wait is the limit he will endure without calling the country "whereabouts a desert."

As long as the stations do not greatly mar the landscape, as long as their service is rendered with the courtesy which has become so pleasantly characteristic of them, and as long—their own lookout—as they can make both ends meet with their earnings, their increase of numbers will draw no loud complaint from the public.

When a motorist drives past 100 stations in succession without stopping, he may feel that there are 99 too many. But when none is found nearby at the moment he suddenly and sorely needs it, he is quick to conclude that there is at least one too few.

WIFE IN THE HOME

American wives may read with amusement at the trials and tribulations of a London grass-widow who, after seeing his wife and children comfortably installed in a rural zone, held to be safe or fairly so from air raids, comes home at night to a house which has been empty three weeks.

The first thing that struck this amateur housekeeper, who found the maid gone and the charwoman out of reach, was that it seemed almost impossible to settle down to one piece of work. Most insistent nuisances he found were the doorbell and the telephone. And he felt the only way to deal with trades people was to tell them not to call—except the milkman with the dairy pint. One of his first discoveries was the speed with which a piece of toast became a flaming ruin while he was gossiping with a neighbor about the possibility of an air raid.

It wasn't long before he realized he wrote—in a very strong letter in the London Times—the value of a wife in a home, the necessity of having some one to look after the trades people, the household and the cat. This air-raid bachelor soon found out that the luxury of a cup of tea in bed was indeed a luxury in the business of getting away to work in the morning.

Although his sister-in-law and the charwoman have come to his rescue, he is about ready to agree that Euripides was right when he said that "man's best possession is a sympathetic wife."

The Finns have placed a big order for insect powder with a New Jersey firm, and if that sensitive Moscow broadcaster wants to make something of it that will be all right (C.O.).

Then he told that the people have in their hands today three important things—the coming generation; the ballot box; and the building of righteousness on the earth. In connection with the coming generation he urged the nurture of boys and girls to a better life; and of the ballot box he said, "Vote for the candidate who will stand for God and the best things in life; vote for men with vision." He urged the need of all striving to make the world a better place. "It is our fault the world is in the trouble it is, because the church does not come first in our lives. . . . Give God your hands and do what pleases Him, regardless of the consequences."

"SELF MADE GIRL" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXIV

A week crept by. Linda effaced herself as much as possible. She dodged Deaming, she dodged Hester. She spent a miserable, lonely week, got a bad cold and had to stay in bed the next week. Deaming sent flowers every day, and Hester came to see her.

She touched a yellow daffodil petal with white, sensitive fingers. "Not a bad guy, Deaming. How much longer are you going to pretend you're not interested in Linda?"

"I'm not pretending," Linda said frankly. "I like him, but it's only the job I care about, really. I don't want him. His wife can have him."

"Oh—that's it."

"What do you mean?"

"Scared of his wife?"

You couldn't be really angry at Hester. She was too frank, too direct. She thought things, and she said them, and she had no intention to hurt. Linda knew that, but she winced as she answered: "Scared?"

No, I'm not scared. But I'm not coming between any woman and her husband. I don't care what sort of no-account he is. I can't help Deaming sending me flowers, but I wish he wouldn't. I don't like it, I hate it! It started innocently enough and now I don't know what to do except quit, and how can I do that? I've got my family to think of."

"If you're thinking about dear Elsie Deaming," Hester said after a long pause, "you can forget her. The boss told me the story ages ago, the old gossip, and made me swear not to tell, and I never did, but I will now. It seems that Deaming has a stenographer, complex or something! Anyway, the present Mrs. Deaming was once the stenographer. The Breen woman was the one he liked best, but the other one made him marry her. He played around with Breen afterwards—maybe he still does or maybe you've really replaced her in his affections. And the wife knows all about it and doesn't give a damn. In fact, there was quite a scandal four or five years ago when she wanted to get a divorce to marry somebody else, and he fought it. So now they're good friends—or maybe it's because he doesn't want to pay her the alimony he'd have to. But as far as coming between a woman and her husband is concerned—you have nothing to worry about."

"I still don't want him."

Hester rose to go. "Do as you like, Hon, but you could do worse. He's got money to spend, let him spend it! Besides he's swell looking, and good company. I could go for him myself."

"I'm still not interested," Linda said—and she meant it.

She'd come a long way since she left home that wintry morning four years ago. She'd worked hard, gained most of the things she wanted.

Little by little, so gradually that she hardly realized it, the old standards had slipped from her. She'd almost forgotten what her mother, her father, Grandma Pologne would have thought, and said, of a girl who even stopped to consider the possibilities that she was considering now. She'd almost forgotten what she herself would have thought, and said, just a little while ago.

Now, it didn't seem to matter, particularly. There was no one left to care what she did. The only person she ever really wanted, the one who sat day by day with her sick mother, and worried that Glenn didn't care enough, she decided that if she couldn't marry for love, she'd marry for money. No half-way course for her.

And how silly that was! Marry for money. . . . How many girls got the chance? Men with money married girls with money. . . . or they married society girls, stage beauties, movie stars.

If she, who wasn't a movie star, or a debutante, wanted the luxuries that only rich men could give. . . . If she NEEDED money, not only for herself, but for the family. . . .

After all. . . .

But there was a something about it. Once you took the step you were sunk, you couldn't turn back.

I'm an idiot to hesitate, she thought angrily. There's no turning back for me, anyway. No reason, no one to care. What am I making such a fuss about? Who am I to pretend I'm better than Hester?

Before Linda was completely over her cold, Claudine was home from the hospital, and Blanche was down with the flu.

"The least I can do," Linda told Deaming when he suggested driving her into the country somewhere, over the week-end, "is to go home and see what I can do about it."

But it was really because she wanted time. Time to think about it further. Time to make up her mind.

In the few days since she had come back to the office, he had spoken more than once of his wish to see her settled in more comfortable quarters. "That club is no place for you. It's all right for young girls and old ladies. But you're past all that, Linda. You owe yourself something better."

"I told you that I couldn't afford an apartment," she reminded him.

"And I told you that I'd see that you could afford it."

"You don't understand. I don't want presents. I want to be independent. When I can pay for an apartment I'll have one. If you want to do something for me, help me get a raise."

He smiled. "That isn't so simple, Linda. I've done what I could for you. You know that. Now, as a friend, I'd like to do more—and you don't want me to. Don't you ever intend to let anyone help you?"

Do you intend to go on alone forever?

"Maybe. Or maybe I'll marry some day."

"And what will that bring you?"

"Happiness, I hope."

He smiled again. "I wonder. It doesn't bring everyone happiness. I don't think that you and I are the marrying kind, Linda. I think you're like me—you value your freedom too much."

"Maybe that's why I want to pay my own way."

"All right! I like your independence. But we'll talk about it again, later. Time you grew up, my dear. No hard feelings?"

"No, no hard feelings," she said. She, too, smiled. But she was glad to get away, even if it was only to Philadelphia and the sick family.

On the train she sat down opposite an elderly man who looked across at her over his spectacles. Then returned to his newspaper. It looked as if it couldn't be. "Mr. Scott!"

He stood up and came over to her chair at once, and she knew from that puzzled line between his eyes, that he hadn't the least idea who she was.

And she was so excited, so happy to think he had thought she was someone he met in London, some girl in Connie's social set, that the gayety and thrill in her voice really brought back to him the little, laughing, black-haired Linda who used to be so much a part of his life, in happier days.

"Linda Perry—of course! How could I have forgotten even for a moment? You still live out in the country?"

"No, I'm in New York now, but the family is in Philadelphia. I'm going to see my sister Blanche, who is ill."

"Oh, I'm sorry to hear that." It was plain that he had forgotten Blanche, if indeed he had ever known her. "I don't get out this way very often myself. Going to see some people about the house. It has been closed for a long time. I may sell it. By the way, have you had lunch? Let's go into the diner."

Back in the parlor car later, he spoke again of the house. "There's no one to live in it any more, you know. Miriam, Constance's mother, is married again—I suppose you know that. And Constance's new husband seems inclined to drag her all over the world—not that she's at all reluctant."

"I had a card from her in Cairo last winter," Linda said. "And a long letter, just before the wedding. She wanted me to be maid of honor."

"That so? A pretty wedding, I thought. White and silver, with lots of those what-you-call-them lilies. I wasn't going to go over for it. Thought it might be awkward, you know. But she said she couldn't get married unless I came to give her away. Always was a dad's girl, Constance. A great girl."

He sighed heavily. "I thought they might like to fix up the old house, and live in it, part of the year, at least, but it wasn't practical. Young people don't settle down, like they used to. My mother and father built the place when it was just open country—no town anywhere around—and raised all their family there. We were very happy. . . . very happy. . . . times change. . . ."

"Yes," Linda said.

Her heart ached for the oldish, lonely man who had once been gay—to go, "young Mr. Scott." But her own elation was mounting. She wasn't a nobody to him! It was true that he had never patronized her, none of the Scotts had—but still, there was a difference in his manner now. He had forgotten the Perrys. She wasn't old Perry, the watchman's daughter any more—she was one of Constance's social equals, a girl he might have met at her wedding, a girl who really was invited to the wedding. . . .

By the time they parted, at Broad street station, some of Linda's confidence in herself had come back. She was a girl who had made good. A girl who could still go ahead.

"Oh, you shouldn't have come!" Blanche yelled when she saw Linda. "You'll catch my cold! For that's all it is, a cold, though it's gone down on my chest, and Doctor insisted on my staying in bed."

"I won't catch it." Linda kissed her sister's flushed cheek, patted her shoulder, and plumped up the pillows competently.

Blanche's apparent weakness just strengthened Linda's confidence in herself. SHE never caught things, she never was ill—and the rest of her family were a lot of semi-invalids, she thought, forgetting Blanche's twenty years of never missing a day at the hospital, and her own recent sojourn in bed.

First Honors

Another milestone may be reached by Bristol High court teams when they take on the Bensalem squads here tonight. While there isn't anything particularly attached to the boys' tilt other than the fact that Coach Tom Campion's proteges will, more than likely, put the "climber" on the championship for the present campaign, yet in the preliminary fray which matches the Red and Gray with the Blue and Grey girls, much depends upon the outcome.

As the local teams take to the court they cannot possibly be beaten for the coveted crown. Both hold two game leads over their nearest rivals with only two tilts to be played by both Bristol clubs and the two second place foes—the Morrisville Bulldogs and Bensalem Owlets. Thus, before play begins, the Red and Gray squads are definitely sure of at least a tie even should they both lose tonight and again against Morrisville.

However, this is not likely in the boys' case. But in the girls' fray, it's a different story. While the Cardinal girls will go into tonight's important battle the favorite, Coach Helen Smith's lassies are sure to give the local clan a struggle in their last bid to gain a tie with Bristol for the league championship. They were badly beaten at Bensalem in their first meeting, 26-14, but they expect to come back to cop the verdict tonight. However, they will be severely handicapped by the loss of their star forward, Hazel Lamon, who is out with an ankle injury. Doris Ely will take her place. The girls will use their regular lineups, but there may be some changes in the boys' array.

MANHATTAN FIVE WINS OVER PROFY, 38 TO 29

The Profy stock in the Bristol Basketball League took a tumble last night as the Manhattan Soap Company team defeated the radionen, 38-29 in a very fast game.

This tilt was close until the final quarter of the game when the soap workers began to pull away from the Mill street boys and broke up its defense completely. Joe Gallagher started the rally by sinking in two long field goals.

By scoring 12 points in the fray, "Punkie" Zeffries jumped into the league lead in the scoring of total points. He is closely followed by Johnny Zack, Ralph Cahall and Billy Gallagher.

The leader of the losing team in scoring was Ray Dorsey who scored five twin-pointers and a trio of fouls or thirteen points.

The Rohm and Haas team again proved too strong and powerful for the Falls Alumni five last night on the Italian Mutual Aid floor as the 1938-39 champions piled up a 53-44 victory over the boys of Mike DeRisi. The victory enabled the chemical workers to jump into second place.

Leading the attack of the winners was Joe Roe who garnered ten field goals. Ralph Cahall and Johnny Cole had a quintet of double-doubles. In all, the winners counted 24 times from the field.

The Alumni team was very slow getting started and towards the end of the game found the range of the nets and began to score in fast order but when the going became dangerous the Rohm and Haas defense clamped down on them and halted their attack. Duerr and Brizgle, the big guns of the Alumni attack, again led their team in scoring with 15 and 11 points, respectively.

Gov. James Says It Is Time Penna. Be "Given A Voice"

ruled by those who have so long cultivated poverty and misery and hate that they can vision no other crop.

"He would find the future of this nation lightly held in the hands of those who can continue to rule only so long as they can keep the hearts of America's men and women heavy with fear of starvation, fear of the present and future alike, with jealousies and rivalries that are sucked from the breast of untruth."

Governor James accused the Roosevelt Governor of losing its seven-year battle against the depression by offering the men and women of the nation "neither faith nor hope—but only charity at the price of liberty."

He warned that the New Deal had "loosed in America a long series of factors in seven years which, if they had been unchecked, could have led this nation to no other goal than dictatorship."

He criticized purported efforts of the New Deal to "destroy the states" through court-packing attempts, reorganization of the governmental set-up, "purges" of anti-New Deal Democrats, and withholding of Federal funds (particularly WPA) from politically-unfriendly states.

"The abuses by the National Government in this (latter) field are a gigantic scandal," Governor James asserted. "Nothing in American history is so despicable than has been the tying of political strings upon money raised that fellow Americans might not go hungry."

Warning that "our national house is divided against itself," Pennsylvania's Governor declared that America today has "free states and slave states."

"The free states," he maintained, "are the ones where the New Deal bounty raised from the Federal taxes is being distributed on a scale that is unnecessary, unwarranted and unhealthy. Perhaps those states believe they are benefitting from this conduct. They are not. The first time those states displease the national administration they will find that they are being chained to their own money, and will be cast into the doghouse of national disfavor."

"On the other side we have the step children of the family, principally those states whose only sin has been disregarding the wishes of Washington by the election of Republican administrations."

Governor James scored the Roosevelt Government's failure to solve the unemployment problem and for allegedly allowing politics to creep into its handling of the relief question. He insisted that the New Deal, after seven years, has furnished no prospects of the "permanent prosperity that can be found within America."

National unity, he maintained, can again be obtained only through restoration of the Republican Party to control in the nation. Only Republican states, he claimed, have succeeded in "keeping politics out of relief," but he admitted that relief must continue "as long as need exists."

"The choice," Governor James said,

Tough Hombre

Arturo Godoy, a tough hombre from Chile who managed to stay fifteen rounds with Joe Louis in New York, looks as pleased as though he had won the championship. Arturo's face shows pounding he received, though Louis, in calling fight his worst, said he couldn't get in a good punch at the weaving, crouching South American.

"is between relief given at the price of political integrity and relief divorced from politics and given on a basis of need."

The Pennsylvania governor called for a re-dedication of the Republican party and urged it to take full advantage in 1940 of "the great opportunity in its history to lead our groping people to the light."

"Our party furnished the leader whose birthday this is, the man who met the National crisis of his day," Governor James declared. "In the coming months it must furnish leadership and inspiration to meet the crisis of our time."

He predicted that "if spring is to come gain in our national life, it will be at the call of the Republican party."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 13—(INS)—Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania warned the nation today that the only way the United States can keep out of the European war is to "give the rest of the world a first class example of tending to our own business—and tending to it properly."

"America can do a more enduring service in one role than in any other," he told a Lincoln Day audience here. "Her place upon the stage is that of a democracy which makes democracy work."

He cautioned against the "temptation to meddle in international affairs, to throw out welfare into the buffeting seas of the dissension now set loose in the world."

Such a course, he warned, would lead to "generations of unhappiness to the peoples of this nation; it would eventually lead to a depression more Titanic than the nation has seen, and it would lead one day in the future to the bitterest struggle of all, struggle of the American people to regain the liberties and freedoms they once had but failed to cherish."
